

Precision Load Development

$400

Continuing education only – not for college credit

This class will be intended primarily for centerfire rifle shooters of at least intermediate reloading skill with an interest in developing the absolute best load for his or her rifle.

Rich Machholz was a ballistic technician at Sierra Bullets for many years and a long-range Benchrest competitor. He began hunting at a very early age and reloading followed shortly thereafter. In the early 1980's he got an idea, made some drawings, hired an attorney and eventually received a design patent for case spinners. He resurrected his old Sportsman Supply Company, which was a retail sales company, but soon developed into a small manufacturing company building portable shooting tables, rifle rests, target stands and the SSC Case Spinners. That eventually lead to freelance writing and later yet got him in the door at Sierra Bullets. r.machholz@gmail.com

Tool/Supply List

It is essential you bring your own equipment, both reloading and shooting.

You will need the following:

Proper eye and ear protection

Your rifle and 100 new, unfired cases of the same cartridge as the rifle

Cleaning equipment for your rifle.

At least 100 matching bullets of the same brand and caliber as the rifle (you may bring as many different brands of bullets as you want)

100 primers of the same maker to go with the cases (you may bring as many different brands as you like)

At least 1 pound of the powder that has performed the best in your rifle so far. (you may bring as many different powders as you like) Remember, matching lot numbers are essential as is adequate quantity so don't bring half a pound of this and half a pound of that and expect excellent results.

Front pedestal rest and bags

Do not forget the following:

Your COMPLETE reloading setup including press, dies, gauges, calipers and any other specialized equipment you would normally use.

Good shooting and safe travels
